1. Should all the coding in this course be done with chatgpt or should the professor make the students write the code on their own.

I think there's benefits to both options. I don't think theirs a wrong answer. In my opinion I think the professor should have us write the code, but should allow us to have full access to chatgpt. Ai is so important and useful in our world today, and its only going to evolve even more. The reason I think you should have us use ai is so we learn how to use it because I think eventually it's going to be an essential skill. I think its going to be such a normal thing in a few years. When it first came out, it was frown upon and students would get in trouble for using it. Just a few years later, professors are starting to open up to it more because they realize the upsides of it. In conclusion, I believe the professor should have us write our own code, but we should have full access to ai.
